About Mark —

Mark Susnow has lived an unique and interesting life involving multiple transitions. As a former trial attorney for 30 years, he was covered by The New York Times, Rolling Stone Magazine, The Boston Globe and The San Francisco Chronicle. In 2000 inspired by the new millenium, Mark became an executive-life coach. He integrates what it takes to be successful in the world with the inner wisdom unfolded to him through years of yoga and meditation.

He is the author of Dancing on the River: Navigating Life's Changes. He is also a contributing author along with Zig Ziglar, Brian Tracy and Denis Waitley in the book 101 Great Ways to Improve your Life. He works with organizations and individuals to help them develop the tools and strategies necessary to navigate the challenging climate of today's complex world.

What Event Planners Are Saying

“Mark’s recent presentation to the Commonwealth Club kept our members thoroughly engaged and entertained. The audience was inspired to see change in a new light.”

—*George Hammond, Chair
Humanities Forum, Commonwealth Club*

“Mark’s recent communication program to our Peernet Organization of all CEO’s taught us the power of communion and how it can positively transform the dynamics of our organizations.”

—*Jay Nathanson, Chairman,
Peernet Group*

“We were privileged to have Mark speak on the topic of ‘Change’ at a recent event. His insightful approach was not only practical but also easy to comprehend. We look forward to having with him back.”

—Megan Sediqui, HR Director at LCCW

“Mark’s inspired “Navigating Change” presentation was the highlight of the Speaker Series. We look forward to having him back.”

—*David D. Griffis, Adjunct Professor
USF School of Business*

“Connection transcends titles, race, age and anything you can think of. From this bond of connection anything is possible.”
